ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SCHOOL BOARD.

To the Dunbarton School District:

In presenting the annual report for the year, we fully appreciate the importance of the work.

The welfare of town and state rests in the public school system. The prominence of New England, and the success gained by her sons in creating a name most honorable, wherever they have gone, testify to the substantial character of her institutions and her people.

Our public schools are the bulwark of our nation, intelligence our safeguard, and the sure index of continued strength and progress.

No well educated man or woman is ever perfectly satisfied with their present attainments or surroundings. The ambition is to secure a higher plane, to reach a broader field of usefulness.

The more complete our public schools become, the higher their standard of excellence, the more zealous we should be to increase their efficiency, and render them more helpful still.

The more we possess of that which is good and substantial, the larger is the desire and the greater is the opportunity for doing good in the world. A new world seemingly opens up before us. We are possessed with new and larger desires to aid and help our brother man in all ways practical and eminently useful.

The truly intelligent citizen is never satisfied to remain stationary. He is reaching forward to something beyond. This ambition is our very life. It is the fount from which we refresh ourselves along the way. Our minds crave something better.

The growth of a people, a town, is measured by this rule. The world moves, and we must keep in pace, or soon we are left behind. The best is none too good. Contented with what we have and are, we have reached our limit, and have become a mere machine; a broken cog on the wheel that grinds no more. Start the boy and girl in the right way, get their feet in the right path, their faces turned towards the rising and not the setting sun, their habits of life well established, for the building of a sound character, and we need have little fear as to their future.

"Like boy, like man," is a homely, but truthful maxim. We wonder why it is parents are so apt to neglect the enforcement upon the mind of their child of the true value of an education, and that the rules and regulations of the school must be obeyed.

When parents will give careful heed to this important matter, lend their loyal influence to this end, a spirit of co-operation will be developed that will be felt for the lasting good of all concerned, that we to-day can hardly imagine. Parents, pupils, and teacher when united in plan and purpose, will create a condition in school progress that will hasten the dawn of the golden age.

There is no reason why we should not witness that condition here, but shall we? Consider these things, we pray you.

During the year we have had five schools in session, each giving twenty-nine weeks of instruction, save in the Waite division, where sickness, after a second attempt at continuance, compelled a final closing.

The spring term at the Centre, and the winter term in the Waite division, as above noted, were interrupted by a case of scarlet fever in the former, and measles in the latter. The teachers have been of a high order of scholarship, and their work has been eminently commendable. In many instances the pupils have acquitted themselves with high honor. We have the most profound admiration for the conscientious, painstaking, efficient, and refined teacher,—they have been on our list this year.

Arbor Day was observed, in some instances a tree was planted, and exercises of remarkable interest were given. Flag-raisings were observed at the North and South schools, where elaborate programmes were presented, and patriotic remarks were made. They were red-letter day events. A new flag has also been purchased by the Centre school.

Our schools now all have flags, and as they float in the breeze over all the schoolhouses of the land above these citadels of the nation's hope, the lessons of patriotism which they incite, will be nobly effective on the minds of the boys and girls—the coming strength of the nation.

Memorial Day was also observed with appropriate exercises befitting the occasion, each school by itself exerting an influence that will long be felt.

We believe in concentration, in a closer union of effort, in economy of forces and of money.

While our five schools have made a good showing for the year, yet the time is near at hand where the casting of the shadow indicates that good judgment will call for further consolidation. The new school law, enacted at the last legislative session, is in the line of better conditions for our schools. We would recommend the forming of a supervisory district, with one or more of the adjoining towns, as provided therein. We believe it would be of mutual help and economy in the truest sense. The law may not be perfect in all its practical workings, but these defects, if such there are, will be remedied in due time, for the principle is right, and has come to stay.

We have endeavored to introduce such new helps to instruction as seemed desirable,—the "Franklin Language Charts" and "Topical Studies in U. S. History," a splendid arrangement for presenting the main historical facts and events in our nation's history,—also Graves's Speller and an Elementary Algebra published by the Ginn Company, —have been approved by us.

Act wisely. The most and the best for the money expended, should be the main aim. Our boys and girls of to-day are the active men and women of the morrow. What we do to promote their best welfare, their preparation for life's duties, should be done quickly, that the full measure of helpfulness, and the very best school training we can provide, may be shared by them.

The legislature may enact laws to govern and regulate our schools, but the practical workings, the true benefits to be realized, are in our hands. They are with the people.

Let us be loyal to our public schools, doing all we can to render them the best service possible to give, that of faithful support and cordial encouragement, always to their strengthening and upbuilding, to the end that the greatest good to the greatest number may be fully realized.

Respectfully submitted,

William H. Stinson,
Bradford Burnham,
John B. Ireland,
Members of School Board.
